New beer ordinance passed in reaction to Manville Madness

by Geoffrey Barnard
wire editor

Bowling Green City Council has passed an ordinance dealing with the use of alcohol at outdoor functions as a result of the "Manville Madness" party last April.

The ordinance, passed Aug. 6, was "brought to a head" by the party and vandalism on Manville, according to Mayor Bruce Bellard.

"(The ordinance) wasn't precipitated by the Manville situation, but it brought to our attention something that we had been concerned about for some time - outdoor parties," Bellard said.

The new law, which went into effect immediately after it was passed, puts restrictions on anyone in Bowling Green who wishes to acquire an F, F-1 or F-2 permit from the state for the purchase and resale of alcohol.

The ordinance is not valid on University-owned or controlled property.

An F permit allows wholesale buying and resale of beer at social and recreational functions. An F-1 permit allows "BYOB" parties in city buildings. An F-2 permit allows corporations and associations to sell beer and hard liquor, according to the Ohio Revised Code.

PEOPLE WANTING to obtain one of the permits must deposit $1,000 with the finance director 15 days before the party and give the municipal administrator detailed information about the function, according to the ordinance.

Also, the function cannot be held in a residential neighborhood, Bellard said.

The ordinance doesn't restrict anyone from buying beer or alcohol at retail prices and having a party, he added.

"There's nothing wrong with someone having a small party in their own neighborhood," Bellard said. "We're trying to avoid someone bringing in 50 kegs and having a really big party."

Bellard said it is still possible for a large, outdoor party to happen, but any alcohol present would have to be bought at retail.

He added the Bowling Green Police are going to be much stricter about large parties in the future.

"They're fine as long as their party stays on private property, but once they step on city property, they've broken the law," he said.

Violating the new city ordinance is a fourth-degree misdemeanor punishable by a $250 fine and 30 days in jail.

THE NEW ordinance is only part of the city's effort to stop future unruly parties, Bellard said. "The ordinance is one of the stopgap measures we think we can put in."

As a more permanent measure, Bellard has appointed a committee to address the problem of residential parties.

"There will be an organizational meeting of the committee, which is made up of 50 percent University people and 50 percent city residents, next week," he said.

He said the committee does not have a defined goal or even a name.

It was referred to as "The Manville Madness Committee" at Monday night's city council meeting by Council President John Quinn.

West Hall work half completed

by Don Lee
staff reporter

The $1.8 million renovation of West Hall is 50 percent complete and only finishing work is left to be done, said Roland Engler, University architect and director of planning, operations and maintenance.

Work to be done includes installation of interior finish walls, flooring, equipment, wiring, conduits and piping, Engler said.

"We're planning on a completion date in December or January if everything goes well," Engler said.

The work had originally been scheduled for completion in October, but removal of asbestos insulation in the building last spring "lost us about two or three months of working time," Engler said.

Work is progressing on schedule, said Willie Heidebrink, superintendent for Rudolph-Libbe of Walbridge, the construction company contracted for the finish work.

"We were held up for awhile waiting for drywall, but that's on schedule now," Heidebrink said. "Aside from that, our biggest problem's been students parking in the (contractors') lot. We had to have six of them ticketed yesterday (Wednesday)."

West Hall will house the School of Journalism, the Radio-Television-Film School, campus radio and television stations and the BG News.

West Hall was the music building from its opening in 1955 to the opening of Moore Musical Arts Center in 1979.

THE WILLIAMS Hall front steps will be repaired along with the rest of the building when Williams Hall is renovated, possibly beginning in January, 1985, Engler said.

The brick surrounding the stairway has pulled away from the backing, Engler said, and could fall away if people lean on the railing.

"We were concerned about the walls on the east side of the front porch, especially around the windows," he said. "I'd hate to have somebody up on the porch sit on that railing and have it fall away."

The steps are blocked off to prevent their use until repairs can be made.

The Ohio House of Representatives has already granted a $2.45-million appropriations bill for the renovation of the building, Engler said.

Work to be done will include updating the electrical wiring to bring it up to present construction codes, installation of new windows and repair of the front steps.

"The systems in that building are quite outdated," Engler said. "When it was built, I don't think there were any uniform building codes."

Ohio outlaws bar happy hours

COLUMBUS (AP) - The Ohio Liquor Control Commission voted unanimously yesterday to outlaw happy hours, in which bars and taverns offer drinks at two-for-one or three-for-one prices.

The new liquor rule, which becomes effective Sept. 20, is designed to discourage bar practices that contribute to excessive drinking - especially just before bars close and patrons are apt to drive away after drinking too much.

Under the rule, bar operators cannot serve a patron more than one drink in a single order.

The change does not prevent taverns from offering reduced drink prices, except that no pricing specials can be held within two hours of a liquor establishment's closing time.

The commission also approved a series of other rule changes, all of them the result of a one-year study by an advisory committee that included officials of the Ohio Department of Liquor Control and industry representatives.

THE NINE-MEMBER committee recommended the changes to discourage practices that lead to excessive drinking and to bring industry advertising practices in line with those for non-alcoholic products.

The proposals received little opposition from industry officials at public hearings earlier this year.

Most representatives of tavern owners said that ending the two-for-one and three-for-one serving practices would not place them at a disadvantage, since competitors would face similar restrictions.

But operators of taverns in counties that border other states contended that in some cases they would be put at a competitive disadvantage by the restriction.

Other changes in liquor regulations include:

- Allowing alcoholic beverages to be sold in conjunction with bingo games or other gambling events sponsored as fund-raisers by tax-exempt agencies, such as churches and fraternal organizations.

- Allowing bar employees who are 19 or 20 years old to serve liquor and wine, but not to sell it.

- Reducing restrictions on appetizers and other food items liquor establishments may offer free to customers.

- Eliminating restrictions that now forbid retailers from off-premises advertising.

- Allowing alcoholic beverage manufacturers and wholesalers to conduct contests with prize awards in connection with product promotions and permitting retailers to hold promotional contests unrelated to alcoholic beverage sales.

The easing of gambling restrictions will not allow regular licensed liquor establishments to conduct gambling and will not permit use of devices otherwise outlawed in Ohio, such as roulette wheels and slot machines.

The regulation concerning 19- and 20-year-old bar employees was needed to clear up their status under the state's present law, which allows people 19 or older to drink beer but requires a minimum age of 21 to buy wine or liquor.

Residents, EPA worried

Toxic clouds seen over dump

VICKERY, Ohio (AP) - A toxic chemical cloud seen over the Ohio Liquid Disposal waste site earlier this week has spawned new worries for residents already bitter about the site's dangers and new questions about how well site supervisors are working with environmental officials.

Legal counselors for the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency are trying to determine if the site's owner, Chemical Waste Management, violated its consent agreement with the state by failing to report the cloud to the state EPA until a day after it rose from a chemical storage pond.

"We're extremely concerned that they didn't notify anybody. Common sense would tell you to notify people in a situation like that even if the consent agreement didn't call for it," Allan Franks, state EPA spokesman, said yesterday from his Columbus office.

The company is required to report unusual incidents at the site within two hours under a decree signed in May that allowed the firm to avoid state prosecution for environmental violations.

FRANKS SAID the cloud was carried downwind from the site toward Clyde, but it injured no one and necessitated no evacuations.

He said the state's agreement with the company is vague about notification requirements in cases of air emissions. If a violation is found, the state could fine Chemical Waste Management up to $50,000 or sue the firm.

Lorey Roggenkamp, spokeswoman for the waste site operators, said company officials did not think the cloud was serious enough to warrant immediate notification.

Franks and other EPA officials met with Vickery residents and waste site operators

Wednesday to try to prevent further incidents at Ohio Liquid Disposal.

Ms. Roggenkamp said the company has installed pumps to circulate liquids in the ponds at Ohio Liquid Disposal and is diluting the ponds to prevent buildup of reactive chemicals.

However, chemical concentrations in the ponds are likely to increase - making them more prone to reactions - as the firm empties and closes the lagoons, she said.

"THERE'S NO guarantee it won't happen again," she said. Local residents are as worried about how another cloud would be handled as about one forming, said Kris Perry, a Sandusky County Health Board member who attended the meeting in Columbus.

Perry said the citizens' group that monitors the waste site will try to set up safety plans in case of another cloud.

Its first goal will be to set up an emergency information network so people know who to call when something goes wrong at the waste site. The group also wants to draw up an evacuation plan that coordinates disaster service agencies and county officials.

The group also wants Ohio Liquid Disposal to install equipment needed to identify the concentration and health hazard of the chemicals in such a cloud.

Perry said officials at the site weren't able to tell callers what the cloud was or how it formed.

"We kind of feel like guinea pigs out here," he said. "When they make mistakes, we feel like we get the brunt of it."

"They are taking a much better attitude about the community, but we just get one thing after another up here."

Celeste's inaction a federal problem

Rep. Delbert Latta, R-5 of Bowling Green, is attempting to enlist the aid of Ohio's two Democratic Senators, John Glenn and Howard Metzenbaum, in an effort to destroy the bottleneck that occurs daily on Route 2 between Cleveland and Sandusky Bay.

A Latta-sponsored federal transportation bill, which only needs Senate approval, would build a bypass near Huron, Ohio, where the root of the traffic problem exists.

Latta managed to get the bill past a Democratic-controlled subcommittee on transportation and through the House. If passed in the Senate it would give the state an extra $15 million to build the bypass.

The traffic jam has been known to slow traffic to under five miles an hour, and cause tie-ups over five miles long. Residents of Huron, where the traffic comes almost to a stop, claim slow moving traffic has created environmental problems for them because of high amounts of exhaust fumes. They also say it is the root of the city's problems in attracting industry.

Unfortunately, the state has moved even slower than traffic en route to eliminating the jam-up. In fact, the state first purchased land to build a bypass near Huron 20 years ago.

What's worse is Governor Celeste has not picked up the pace in solving the problem, either. The Federal Government allocated $400 million to the state for highway projects last year, of which $300 million was used to build an expressway leading from downtown Columbus to Columbus International Airport. Not one cent was put toward the $45 million bypass.

The Governor is obviously ignoring the problem in favor of economic expansion elsewhere in the state.

We can only hope the Senate passes Latta's bill and ends a problem the state should have solved.

Campaign '84 heating up

by William M. Welch

The following is an analytical column intended to explore one aspect of a political issue or topic.

President Reagan has begun his re-election campaign by turning the age issue on his Democratic opponents, chiding that "their ideas are just too old," while challenger Walter Mondale describes the Republican as a cold and uncaring country-club president.

As quickly as the fall presidential campaign left the Labor Day starting blocks, Reagan and Mondale were trading jabs.

"I don't believe a president should just serve all the people in his country club," Mondale said as he and running mate Geraldine Ferraro campaigned from New York to California Monday. "I believe a president should serve all the people in the country."

Reagan, at the same time, was denouncing the Democrats as "that pack of pessimists roaming the land." And he addressed with humor possible concern about his age, 73, by aiming the issue back at the Democrats.

"Trouble is, our opponents treat each new idea the old-fashioned way: they spurn it."

"I hate to say this," Reagan added, "but the age factor may play a part in this election. Their ideas are just too old."

Both candidates kicked off their fall campaigns with traditional Labor Day appearances.

Reagan spoke to a crowd of more than 20,000 - Reagan's campaign claimed closer to 50,000 - at a park in Orange County, Calif., a huge, predominantly conservative Republican region just south of Los Angeles and smack in the heart of Reagan's political homeland.

Mondale, accompanied by his running mate, began with a march up Manhattan's Fifth Avenue - where few showed up to watch - and flew on to a rally in little Merrill, Wis., where most of the town's 9,500 people turned out. They then flew on to California for a final event, joined by former rival Gary Hart, before Mondale and Ferraro split up to campaign. Ferraro offered sharp rhetoric in attacking Reagan, portraying him as peddling superficial patriotism while trying to impose his religious and moral views on others.

"I don't think the American people buy the self-conscious patriotism that's made on Madison Avenue. They feel the selfless, quiet patriotism of Main Street America," she said.

And she belittled Reagan's background as an actor.

"While Ronald Reagan was making movies, Fritz Mondale was making history as a champion of civil rights and social justice," she said. "While Ronald Reagan was host of 'Death Valley Days,' Fritz Mondale was trying to get Medicare passed for senior citizens."

Vice President George Bush, too, plunged into the fray, campaigning in New Orleans after marching in a Labor Day parade in the largely Democratic Chicago suburb of Lemont, Ill., where he described Mondale as "a little desperate."

Bush inched closer to a debate with Ferraro. "I'll make that decision pretty soon, maybe in a week or so," Bush said. "I'd look forward to it. . . . I expect there will be one."

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, meanwhile, began his formal campaign in support of the Democratic ticket with a speech in Norfolk, Va., saying Reagan has dealt setbacks to civil rights and public education. "Reagan's record is a threat to our future," he said.

Reagan sees deficit by a different light

by Art Buchwald

I received a call from a friend in the Office of Management and Budget who said he has been asked to cook up a new batch of deficits for the elections.

"Nobody's here so it's okay for you to come over."

I found him in the OMB's test kitchen where they try out every new recipe before packaging it for the public.

"Here," he said. "Put these on to protect your eyes."

"What are they?" I asked.

"Rose-colored glasses. Everyone in the administration is required to wear them when cooking up government numbers."

"What's in the pot?" I asked him.

"Our new figures for the campaign. It looks like we're only going to have a $174 billion budget deficit instead of the $200 billion that we originally predicted."

"It smells fishy," I said.

"That's just because I put in tremendous portions of gross national product and added large tax revenues which we hadn't counted on this year. It tastes delicious."

He gave me a spoon and I tried it.

"It's not bad. But after all, you've only cooked this for the Reagan people. Will you be able to bring it in at $174 billion when you have to feed the whole country?"

"No question about it. For one thing we took out all the fat in government spending. With the economy really cooking along, interest rates ought to drop. The only thing that could spoil the recipe is if Congress keeps adding more ingredients than we need. If we can stick with what we've got we can reduce the deficits to a measly $139 billion by 1989."

"Have you added any new income taxes to the recipe for the next year?"

"Not at the moment. The president can't digest anything that has new income taxes in it. The last time we served him a deficit stew with taxes in it he spit it out and fired the chef."

"So you really think you can cook up a dish of deficits for $174 billion without adding any new taxes?"

"We can for the election, but we're keeping our options open for 1985. We might have to throw in a federal sales tax or a value added tax, but we're not going to announce it until after November."

"I still don't know how you created this so fast," I said.

"When you're cooking numbers you have to go on certain assumptions. For example, I figure that by adding optimism the real growth in the pot will increase by 4 percent each year until 1989. Inflation will simmer at around 4 percent and that means the government's borrowing rate will be reduced to 5.1 percent. That should make your mouth water."

"Mondale says those are unrealistic assumptions."

"What else would he say? He wants to be president. If he makes it, which we all doubt, he'll cook the figures just the way we have."

"He says you have a secret recipe for deficits that you're not telling the American people about, and what you're cooking up now is some voodoo stew that even Reagan's economic advisers can't stomach."

"It's not worthy of comment," the OMB man said. He then sprinkled 100 large folders into the pot.

"What did you just add?" I asked.

"Defense contracts. That's what gives the deficit its rich taste."

Carter the grand ex-president

by Hugh A. Mulligan

Jimmy Carter's arrival in Manhattan with a busload of church volunteers to help renovate a slum tenement proves there is a gratifying, productive life beyond the Oval Office.

The former president from Plains, Ga., a dab hand at furniture making, has let it be known on several occasions that he has more fun making a cabinet than presiding over one.

Thomas Jefferson felt the same way when he left the White House in 1809 and gave his awl (sic) to making repairs at Monticello, the lovely estate he had sadly neglected during his years in politics. Relieved that "a terrible burden had been lifted" from him, the author of the Declaration of Independence spent the remaining 17 years, until his death on the Fourth of July, 1826, pursuing a variety of hobbies. These included music, cooking, scientific farming, architecture and inventing things like the "polygraph," the earliest of all copying machines that enabled him to make duplicates of his extensive correspondence.

The most famous of all his pen pals was John Adams, the nation's second president, who had retired eight years earlier and devoted himself to the study of religion. Crusty old Adams lived on to age 91, dying on the same historic day as Jefferson, exactly 50 years after the birth date of the Republic.

Adams' son John Quincy Adams ran for Congress after finishing his term in the White House in 1829 and won, defeating two other candidates. "My election as President of the United States was not half so gratifying," he wrote in his diary.

John Quincy Adams then spent 17 years in the House of Representatives, rarely missing a roll call, despite declining health.

Retired President Ulysses S. Grant tried his hand at banking, which he knew nothing about, and promptly lost his life's savings of $100,000. Dead broke, in desperation, he turned to writing magazine articles about his war experiences. His instant rapport with readers inspired him to become the first president to hit pay dirt penning his memoirs.

Calvin Coolidge, who did not choose to run in 1928, also decided to devote his retirement years to magazine writing, as an Associated Press dispatch reported on the very day his presidency ended. He signed to do articles for the Ladies Home Journal, the American Magazine and Hearst publications. Silent Cal, known to the ages as a man of few words, then became a daily newspaper columnist, cranking out 200-word pieces "on anything you choose to write, with such relation to the daily news as may seem appropriate to you," at $3,000 a week plus a percentage of the action from the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Lives of great men all remind us that the rubber chicken circuit is not life's goal.

Olscamp should share the wealth

According to President Olscamp, his trip to China with Mrs. Olscamp will "enhance the number (of persons affected) and the quality of education for Bowling Green students and faculty. . . . When the faculty goes to other countries to study, they bring back experiences and share those with the students. This enhances their ability to educate in the classrooms." This presumably explains why Dr. and Mrs. Barber were invited along.

I agree with this position. In fact, I agree so strongly that I would like to see this opportunity spread around even further, so that Dr. Olscamp's and Dr. Barber's students are not the only ones to benefit. Let me therefore suggest that President Olscamp hold a "BGSU Lotto" for his place on the next trip. All University professors and graduate assistants should be eligible. The winner and his or her spouse will receive both a well-deserved rest and the educational shot in the arm that President Olscamp is so enthusiastic about.

If Dr. Olscamp is correct, and the entire University is supposed to be enhanced by these trips overseas, then this experience is too valuable to restrict to the Office of the President. He's had his chance - it's time for this extraordinary opportunity to be shared.

Gee, my phone's out. No it's GTE

With the return of students to BG this past week, you'd think General Telephone would be better accommodated and prepared to handle its many new customers in a market they have a monopolistic grip on.

I'm waiting in anticipation to see which will arrive first, a jingle on the phone saying your phone is now in service (which on average takes nine to 10 days), or a bill in the mail listing service charges (explained in monetary value) of what they did during this time span.

GTE definitely is taking advantage of a service we could not live without today, in a city where the University is the backbone of the community and where the students are the financial support and strength of the University. Thanks GTE!

From the mouth of Ron: a blunder

In Feb. of 1983 President Reagan made a remark that he later said he could "kick himself" for. He remarked that he was considering lifting all corporate taxes at a rally originally designed to show his concern for the jobless workers in attendance.

Later that year, when asked about the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s alleged communist ties, Reagan said, "Well, we'll know in about 35 years, won't we?" when he should have flatly dismissed the question.

This year, when referring to the countless millions of Europeans constantly protesting the presence of American nuclear missiles in their backyard, he said, "Those people don't speak for the majorities in those countries" when, in fact, those people are the majority.

The president has many times stated his belief that ICBM's (on this continent) are much more threatening and consequential to the arms race tension than are cruise missiles in Western Europe when the simple facts of Launch On Warning logistics directly contraindicate this notion.

The president's opinion is that increases in the numbers of nuclear missiles correlates to an increase in national security and that we will survive the mathematical probability of nuclear holocaust this policy creates. If so, then he MUST be able to accept the responsibility accompanying such policy. This already tense situation cannot tolerate any more of Reagan's verbal blunders such as the infamous "bombing Russia" joke of a couple of weeks ago. Whether made in public or private, on or off the record, our president's remarks influence opinions around the world. It is ridiculous to increase the risk of a nuclear nightmare because our leaders lack the diplomatic finesse required in this touchy situation. I only hope that the rest of the world realizes that the lightness of attitude and misconceptions toward the nuclear arms race exemplified by our president are not representative of the rest of the American people.

Olympic band includes 4 BGSU music seniors

by Patricia Ritter
assistant managing editor

Athletes didn't represent Bowling Green at the summer Olympics last month - band members did.

Four University senior music education majors, David Sarachene, saxophonist from Malvern; Dave Harbart, percussionist from Strongsville; Melinda Slusser, trumpet player from Columbus Grove; and Keely Kuenzel, mellophone player from Wakeman, were among 748 college students who performed with the Olympic All-American Band.

Only eight Ohio students were in the band. The other four were from Ohio State University.

Performing with the Olympic group was an experience the Falcon Marching Band members find hard to describe.

"Sure, we had sunburn, sore muscles from hours of marching and tired chops from practicing, but it was great. I can't think of another way to put it," Sarachene said.

Since the musicians received their music before they arrived in Los Angeles, the group's rehearsal hours were spent perfecting routines for the opening and closing ceremonies. Practices went from 8 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. for two weeks, Kuenzel said.

"I NEVER wondered if all the pain and discipline was worth it. I just asked myself 'Am I gonna make it?'" Harbart added.

According to Slusser, the discipline was nerve-racking at times.

"The director (Dr. Arthur Bartner from the University of Southern California) would single you out of 800 people and really make you feel like a jerk if you were moving when you weren't supposed to be," she said.

Because the musicians from states other than California didn't get to play at many of the athletic events, they were promoters of the Olympics and gave performances at tourist attractions.

"Even though we didn't see much of the Games, we still felt a part of it all. The group unity was still there," Harbart said.

"Before the first rehearsal, we had a big psyche-up session. That's when they made it clear for us we were there for the U.S.A., not for ourselves or for our schools," she said. "The patriotism was overwhelming."

The four musicians agreed the highlight of the Games for them was performing in the opening and closing ceremonies. The crowd response to their shows was deafening, they added.

"WHEN WE finished the closing ceremonies, even though I was near tears because of the excitement, I actually felt relieved," Sarachene said. "The people out there - our directors, squad leaders and spectators - had a way of digging pride out of us, but after performances they didn't have to dig too hard."

Harbart said people would come up to members of the band and ask for their autographs or offer to buy parts of their uniform.

"Everyone teases us about being products of the Games, but after (an) experience like that, it doesn't bother me," he added.

GSS advances interests of graduate students

by Mike McIntyre
staff reporter

While the Undergraduate Student Government may represent all undergraduates at the University, the Graduate Student Senate represents the needs of graduate students.

"The needs and concerns of graduate students are significantly different than those of undergraduates mainly because graduate students are an older population with ages ranging from 23 on into the 60s," Kory Tilgner, president of the Graduate Student Senate, said.

Tilgner said the primary purpose of the senate is to advance the interests of graduate students at the University.

"GSS acts as a liaison between graduate students and the administration," he said.

"We also have representation on over 45 different standing University committees. Our representation is there to advance the issues and concerns of graduate students and to affect policy change."

Tilgner said there are about 45 graduate programs at the University and he believes they are excellent on the whole, noting that many University graduate programs are nationally recognized.

HE ADDED with the new Role and Mission of the University, the programs will be getting better in the future.

"This year is the beginning of a significant change in GSS's influence with the University," Tilgner said. "The new Role and Mission adopted by the University puts great emphasis on graduate education and research here. As it is implemented, it will change the character of the University. Hopefully in the next few years we will see two new doctorate programs and improvement of the master programs."

Many residence halls on campus house undergraduates, but there is no separate on-campus housing for the more than 2,300 graduate students at the University. Tilgner said he would like to see that change.

"I definitely feel that graduate students want and need an alternative to off-campus housing," he said. "On-campus housing will surely be less expensive and there will be a greater need because more graduate students will be coming to the University in the near future."

Tilgner said in addition to spending over half its budget on programming for graduate students, GSS administers money from the Professional Development Fund to graduate students to help defer travel expenses so they are able to make presentations and attend conferences in their fields.

"Talking with people on the cutting edge of your discipline is very important to your professional development," Tilgner said.

Number of sports passes decreased

All-Sports Passes are available to full-time University students again this year with a few changes, according to Phil Goldstein, assistant director of financial affairs in the athletic department.

The All-Sports Pass allows students to purchase tickets to athletic events at about 65 cents per game and saves the student up to $50. Game tickets are normally $2 for students.

The cost of this year's pass is $24 and is charged to the student's bursar account.

Goldstein said 6,472 passes were sold last year. He said there will be significantly fewer passes available this year due to the results of a survey conducted by the Student Athletic Board.

In the survey of a cross-section of the student body, students indicated they would be willing to pay more for an All-

Sports Pass if less passes were available, thereby "giving them a better shot at guaranteeing a seat," Goldstein said.

THE SEATING problem mainly exists for hockey and basketball. The more All-Sports Passes sold, the more difficult it is to get a seat for games.

The number of passes available to students isn't certain yet, Goldstein said.

"The problem is, we've got a budget to meet and a certain amount of money to get by the sale of the All-Sports Passes ... or drop a sport," Goldstein said. He said by raising the price and lowering the number of passes available, the budget will be met and students can be accommodated.

Pass holders may pick up general admission tickets for hockey and basketball games 48 hours before they go on sale.

Male-female relationships called beneficial

by Patty Lupica
reporter

Male-female relationships are more beneficial during college years than most people think, according to Dr. Elizabeth Algeier, associate professor of psychology.

The years spent at a university are a time to develop friendships between genders and to build one's personality through varied relationships, Algeier said.

She said it is important to have friendships with people of the other gender because men and women are more similar than they are different.

"We all have the same emotions and feelings," said Algeier.

She said relationships are easier if one views the other gender as equal.

"If you have only friendships within your same gender, you are cutting down the universe in half and limiting yourself to just 50 percent of possible friendships," she said.

"AN INDIVIDUAL can broaden his or her interests by having a relationship with someone of the other gender. A person could discover other interests and hobbies through such a relationship, therefore strengthening his or her personality," she said.

"We are getting over the era where one would only communicate with his or her same religion, race and economical background and entering a new era without artificial limitations," Algeier said.

Racial and gender equality is progressing if one compares what it is now to what it was in 1900, she added.

Algeier said friendships between the genders are good for personal development.

"An example is if a female only associates with other females, she is less likely to talk about sports, other types of music and, perhaps, mechanical things. But if she discovers other experiences by having many friendships, she is developing herself as a person."

A FEMALE and male in a good friendship also have an excellent model for a good marriage relationship, Algeier said, adding that in a friendship, both people share their problems, needs and ideas - some of the things that add to a good marriage.

"If you have the friendship roommate model in a marriage, you can share the housework and chores as you would with friends instead of splitting according to gender roles," Algeier said. "It is better to decide on individual preference and ability."

Office seeks BG loyalty

by Beth Macy
reporter

Most undergraduates are not yet ready to think about becoming alumni, but the Alumni Affairs office is working hard to make sure that when students graduate, they won't forget their days at the University.

"Our goal is to maintain loyalty to the University after graduation," said Wendy Luther, the assistant director of Alumni Affairs.

The office plays a large role in coordinating many campus and alumni activities, including homecoming, Parents' Day, Senior Challenge and alumni trips, she said.

This year, the trip is a cruise to the Virgin Islands at the end of February. "We usually have a pretty good turn-out on the trips, but it does depend on the type of trip and the cost," Luther said.

The office also is largely responsible for the coordinating of homecoming. This year's activities are specially designed to attract more recent alumni.

"WE'RE HOPING to try something fun and different this year by having a special section for the younger alumni, which will include an alumni band," she said.

An event geared to undergraduate students is Senior Challenge. Each senior class pledges to donate money to the University after graduation. Last year's class pledged a record-setting amount of $40,000, Luther said. That money will go to the Placement Office, to short-term loans available through the Financial Aid and Student Employment Office and to any specific place the donor requests.

"However, the sole purpose of our office is not to raise money," she said. "Although we do sponsor the Senior Challenge, most of our activities are designed to keep the alumni interested in what is going on here at the University."

T & BG STUDENTS ARE THE BEST IN THE MAC!

Falcons head East

by Tom Reed
 sports reporter

Bowling Green's soccer team is finding out what it's like going from the frying pan to the fire. Fresh off two losses against highly-regarded Fresno State and Baltimore-Loyola, the Falcons travel to Oneonta, N.Y. this weekend to meet a nationally ranked eastern powerhouse with the possibility of facing another. Tonight, BG opens the Mayor's Cup Classic when they play 14th ranked Hartwick University, which is located in Oneonta, and if victorious will face 12th ranked Rutgers tomorrow.

FALCON ASSISTANT coach Charlie McSpirtt said BG will hold its own against the stiff competition and thinks playing such high caliber opposition will only improve the young Falcon team.

"I think we are going to be very competitive this weekend, you won't see us backing down, McSpirtt said. "I think this weekend will also help us down the road, we're playing such good teams here, that our young guys will have had some awful good experience by mid season."

If the Falcons hope to be competitive this weekend, they will have to improve their anemic offensive attack. During last weekend's two setbacks, BG only managed a pair of goals, and 13 shots on goal, while spending most of time retrieving the ball deep in their own end.

Falcon head coach Gary Palmisano has made it no secret that the lack of offensive punch has centered around the inexperienced players in the line-up and that improvement will only come with time.

HOWEVER, the possible return of last year's leading scorer Dennis Wesley might speed up progress. The South African native who scored 24 goals last year missed the entire preseason with a knee injury and might play this weekend.

Another injured Falcon who might return to the line-up is fullback Joe Barros. In the FSU match, Barros broke his nose and hurt his calf in a midfield collision.

But, even with the addition of Wesley and Barros, the Falcons will have a difficult task ahead of them.

Hartwick finished last season with a 14-4-1 record, and opened this fall on a winning note by beating William and Mary College 5-3. The Warriors are captained by their junior goalie Mike Harrison, who also received the team's MVP honors last fall.

Offensively, HU is led by sophomore Paul Cushion who tallied 17 goals in his first season. The Warriors are strong in the midfield with junior Pat Cruickshank, who scored eight goals, and added six assists, and sophomore Dave Magistrale, who led the team in assists with 11, both scheduled to return.

IF THE FALCONS can get by the HU tonight they will then have the unenviable pleasure of facing Rutgers.

Last fall the Scarlet Knights posted a 17-0-2 record, qualifying for the NCAA tournament before bowing out in the second round. The Mid-Atlantic Conference champs are led by two-time all-American fullback Dave Masur.

Up front sophomore Bobby Joe Esposito, who netted 14 goals last fall, and junior Mike Talerico will provide a bulk of the RU scoring punch. The Scarlet Knights also arguably own the best goalie in the nation, Dave Yeager.

Bowling Green defender Tod Johnson (2) slide tackles Fresno State's Dave Mays in last Saturday's match in which BG lost in double overtime, 2-1. BG will go for its first win today

WHAT EVERY STUDENT SHOULD KNOW ABOUT THE DIFFERENCES BETWEEN LEASING A TELEPHONE AND LEASING A CHICKEN.

Yes, there are differences. And we think you should know what they are. Ask yourself these questions.

WHEN YOU LEASE A CHICKEN, DO YOU GET THREE MONTHS FREE DURING THE SUMMER?

Probably not. But when you lease your telephone from AT&T this fall, you won't pay any lease charges next summer. You can use your phone at home, and bring it back to school in the fall.

DO LEASED CHICKENS COME IN A SELECTION OF COLORS AND STYLES?

No. Chickens don't come in many colors. But the AT&T telephone you lease this fall comes in a variety of colors and three popular styles.

ARE LEASED CHICKENS REPAIRED FREE?

Don't kid yourself. Repairing a chicken is a delicate process that requires the work of expensive professionals. However, in the off chance your

AT&T leased telephone needs repairs, we'll fix it absolutely free when you visit any of our AT&T Phone Centers.

ARE LEASED CHICKENS SHIPPED DIRECTLY TO YOU?

Ship a chicken? Don't be silly. However, your AT&T leased telephone will be shipped directly to you after one call to 1-800-555-8111, or you can pick up your phone at any of our AT&T Phone Centers.

ONE FINAL QUESTION: DOES IT COST THE SAME TO LEASE A CHICKEN AS TO LEASE A TELEPHONE THIS FALL?

Hardly. While we have no hard data on the exact cost of leasing a chicken, we can tell you with some certainty that the cost of leasing a telephone this fall is far less than you might think.

The decision to lease a chicken or a telephone, of course, rests with you. But should you opt for the telephone, remember: you get three months free next summer, and you can take the phone home with you. There's a choice of colors and styles, free repair, and we'll ship you the phone or you can pick it up at any of our AT&T Phone Centers.

It doesn't cost much either. And that's something to crow about.

Green Sheet

Vol. XV, No. 1

Bowling Green State University

September 7, 1984

Bombs away!

Rev the engines. Clear the runway. The Brian McClure aerial show is ready for takeoff. During the past two years, there hasn't been a better college quarterback in the country. The junior thrower holds numerous Bowling Green, Mid-American Conference and NCAA records, and he has led his team to the best two-year record in the conference, including one appearance in the California Bowl.

And this year promises to be as high-flying as the past two, as more than 36 other lettermen return to fly support for McClure, who last year became the first sophomore quarterback in NCAA history to throw for more than 3,000 yards in a single season.

This year's aerial fireworks begin at 1 p.m. Saturday (Sept. 8) as the Falcons host the Richmond Spiders at Doyt Perry Field.

Tickets for all Falcon football games are now on sale at the Memorial Hall box office. Hours for the office are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and from 9-11 a.m. on home game days.

In addition, tickets can also be purchased at the Ice Arena from noon to 4 p.m. weekdays and, on game days, at the Stadium beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Individual games tickets, season tickets and All-Sports-Passes are still available.

Green Sheet is published by the Bowling Green State University Office of Public Relations for students, faculty and staff. It is produced in cooperation with the BG News.

The next issue of Green Sheet will be published Sept. 21 and will cover events occurring between Sept. 24 and Oct. 7. The deadline to submit information for that issue is noon Wednesday, Sept. 19.

All events must be submitted in writing to the Green Sheet editor, 806 Administration Building. In the event of space limitations, those events submitted at the earliest date will be given preference. There is no charge to have an item listed.

Two encore presentations of the summer campus and community musical theater production of "Fiddler on the Roof" will be presented at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday (Sept. 7-8) in Kobacker Hall of the Moore Musical Arts Center.

Tickets for the award-winning musical are priced at $5 and $3 for students and senior citizens, and $7 and $5 for all others. University students with a valid I.D. can receive a $1 discount off regularly priced tickets. Tickets can be reserved by calling the Center's box office at 372-0171 or purchased at the box office between 10 a.m.-2 p.m. weekdays or between 10 a.m.-8:30 p.m. on performance dates.

Produced by Bowling Green High School choral director James Brown, who is also musical director, the show is being directed by Dr. F. Scott Regan of the University's theater faculty. Laura Kissner of Toledo is choreographer and Rob Johnson of Bowling Green is set and technical director.

Thomas L. Kinney, a professor of English at the University, heads the cast as Teyve, the poor but hard-working dairyman who struggles to earn a living for his wife and five spirited daughters while upholding the traditions of his religion and community in Czarist Russia.

Others in the cast include area residents as well as University students.

Fest features five bands

Five solid hours of music by area bands will highlight the second annual Fall Fest, which will be held from noon to 7 p.m. Saturday (Sept. 22) at College Park.

The day of activities is being sponsored by the University Activities Organization in conjunction with the Theta Chi Ox Roast and Sigma Chi Derby Days. All events are free and open to the public. Tickets will be sold for beer, soft drinks, food and games with prizes.

A local band, The Wet Shavers, will perform first from noon to 1 p.m. Then at 1:30 p.m., The Bowlers will perform for an hour. The Bowlers are comprised of ex-members from the Euclid Beach and Eric Carmen bands. They played at last year's Fall Fest and specialize in 60s music including songs from the Beatles and the Beach Boys.

The Urge will take the stage at 3 p.m. featuring a pre-programmed computer that plays all drums and percussion. Then from 4:30-5:30 p.m., Spellbound, a nine-piece funk and rhythm-and-blues band, will entertain with their own unique sound. Spellbound recently played in Cleveland at the Kool Jazz Festival and at "Starfest" with Gladys Knight and the Pips.

The day of music will conclude at 6 p.m. when Fayrewether, a "theatrical rock" band, appears for a one-hour performance. The band, who performed in the Ballroom of the Union in 1982, plays several numbers by Genesis, The Tubes, Talking Heads and Steely Dan. The group uses a variety of costumes and props to make their music come alive.

UAO offers classes for the fun of it

Aerobics, film making, juggling, photography, mixology, and euchre are simply a few of the titles of mini-courses being offered this semester by the University Activities Organization.

More than a dozen non-credit, for the fun of it courses will meet one or two nights a week for students who wish to indulge themselves on an offbeat or unique topic.

Some of the courses are free, while others have a small ($5 to $20) registration fee. Registrations are now being accepted and deadline for sign-ups is Friday (Sept. 14). Fees are payable upon registration.

Additional information about all of the courses and application materials can be obtained by contacting the UAO office, third floor of the Union.

Scripts of the play are available for 24-hour loan in the theater office, 322 South Hall. Directed by Dr. Charles Boughton, a professor of speech, the play will be presented Nov. 8-10 and 14-17.

BGSU Flying Team: For those who dare

By Stacey Mason

Soaring through the air, hundreds of feet above the earth is an experience many people only dream about. The University offers to "those who dare" the opportunity to be a member of the BGSU Precision Flying Team.

Although the University team, which flies out of the Poe Road airport is open to both pilots and non-pilots, the main requirement for membership is a strong commitment to the club. Since most don't own planes the sport can be very expensive. Pilots will need to pay a rental fee for a plane, and there are also entry fees, overnight accommodations and food expenses to keep in mind when the team is in competition.

Two-year member Thanos Liarakos, a history graduate student, said, "The team depends on members to give their all to the sport."

The club meets once a week to discuss flying and prepare for competitions. Liarakos said, "As we get closer to competition, we may spend five hours a week in preparation."

The Bowling Green team participates in regional competition against other universities in Michigan, Indiana and Ohio. The top two winners in regional competition go on to the national competition. This year the regional competition will be held at Cuyahoga Community College in Cleveland.

Competition includes power off-and-on landings, message drops on a fixed point, simulator events, and flying from a fixed point to a fixed point while calculating time and fuel consumption accurately. Non-pilots may compete in pre-flight inspections and air craft recognition tests.

If you have ever thought about becoming involved in a student organization or two, circle Wednesday (Sept. 12) on your calendar. On that day, the annual Student Organizations Fair will be held from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Grand Ballroom of the Union. Representatives from more than 75 organizations will be available to answer questions and take applications.

The event is open to all.

Bowling Green's ten-year-old sport receives some aid from the University and costs $15 a semester to be a member. The sport is approved by the National Intercollegiate Flying Association. The team's adviser is Dr. Dennis Lytle, associate professor of business education.

"Flying is a kind of love; you must give it all you've got and what you get in return is indescribable," Liarakos said.

Students interested in joining the club should contact Dr. Lytle at 287 Business Administration.

Only clinic of its kind in Ohio

Saturday clinic needs volunteers

Noise. Lots and lots of noise. Running, jumping, ball throwing, dancing, talking and game playing. It appears like a classroom gone mad, but to Delores Black, an associate professor in the School of HPER, it is the sights and sounds of success.

It is the efforts of 40 handicapped children who are learning to minimize the effects of their disabilities and build self-confidence. And it is the efforts of 50 student volunteers who give two hours of their time every other Saturday to work with and care about these children.

The children and students comprise the School of Health, Physical Education and Recreation Saturday Activity Clinic for the Handicapped. This year's program begins with an organizational meeting which will be held at 2 p.m. Sunday (Sept. 9) in 100 Eppler North. This meeting is open to all University students who can volunteer their services for the entire academic year. All details concerning the program, schedule and the possibility of receiving academic credit will be discussed at the meeting.

Begun in 1975 as an activity clinic for blind children, the program has grown to include children with other physical and mental handicaps. The program is coordinated by Black and is the only clinic of its kind in the state of Ohio which offers services free of charge.

The philosophy of the clinic is simple: engage these children in activities which will provide them with the opportunity to improve their physical skills and develop greater self-confidence and self-awareness, and offer these activities on an individual basis so that each child may succeed at what he or she is doing.

Think snow. Think Colorado. Think UAO.

Sure, it's still warm out. Sure the sun is still high in the sky. Sure, there is no chance of snow. But, if you want to have the best winter vacation of your life, now is the time to start thinking snow — and skiing.

Again this year, the University Activities Organization is sponsoring a nine-day ski trip to Steamboat Springs, Colo. The trip leaves the University Jan. 5 and returns Jan. 13.

A magnet for vacationing college students, Steamboat Springs features more than 700 acres of ski trails, some of them as long as 2.5 miles. The trails offer a challenge for both the beginning and expert skier — and everyone in between.

The cost of the trip is $270 and includes roundtrip bus transportation, accommodations in condominium complexes, lift tickets and admittance to daily parties.

Reservations can now be made by contacting the UAO office, third floor of the Union. A $100 deposit is required when registering.

Logo contest set

The University will celebrate its 75th anniversary during the 1985-86 academic year, and in preparation for that celebration, a contest to develop an official logo has been announced.

The logo will be used on a wide range of publications, stationery and other appropriate items during the 1985-86 year.

The design competition is open to anyone. The deadline for entries is 5 p.m. Oct. 15. A $250 cash prize will be awarded for the winning entry. All entries must be submitted as black and white camera-ready art, designed to be reproduced in one color, on 10" x 12" illustration board in a self-addressed, 12" x 15 1/2" manila envelope. The entrant's name, address and local telephone number must be affixed to the back of the entry. Entries will be accepted at the reception desk on the first floor of the Milet Alumni Center.

The winning entry will be announced on Nov. 10, 1984. That entry becomes the property of the University.

For further information on the contest, contact the Office of Public Relations, 372-2616.

Two Wheelin'

Bowling Green is a bicyclist's haven

by J. Douglas Gurnick

Bicycling as a sport has enjoyed increased popularity on college campuses since the motion picture "Breaking Away." It is a film about an Indiana University townie who dreams of joining the internationally known Italian cycling team.

Among those college campuses, Bowling Green is no exception. Looking around campus, one can see how students rely on their bicycles for transportation to classes.

Bikecentennial is a company that tailors to cyclists. They have mapped out a touring route that connects the West and East Coasts. Bowling Green is one of the cities on the Iowa to Maine Bicycle Route.

"We get a lot of people coming through on the route. We probably had a dozen (riders) in August," said Mike Purcell, owner of Purcell's Bike Shop, 131 W. Wooster. Purcell's Bike Shop is one of the local shops listed in the Bikecentennial service directory for supplies and necessary repairs.

Purcell said he didn't meet many people who were taking the entire route coast to coast. It was mainly people who were doing segments of the route.

"We had an Oregon couple and a few people from California who were doing a major part of the route. A lot of the people who stop in are heading either to New York City or Boston," Purcell said.

Many cyclists stay the night in Bowling Green at Wintergarden, an American Youth Hostel which happens to be the largest in Ohio with 32 beds, located on the Bikecentennial Route.

Bob Beard, associate professor of health, physical education and recreation at the University, and his wife, Joan, have been houseparents of the

Cycling Tips

If you are interested in cycle touring and would like to take a short trip on the Bikecentennial Route, here are the directions for a 25-mile round trip from the University to Pemberville:

Take Manville southbound until it dead ends into Napoleon Road. Turn left on Napoleon and pass over I-75, then bear left onto T-241/Dirlam Rd. (first turn). Turn right onto Ohio 105. Follow 105 for about eight miles into Pemberville.

When riding keep in mind the following information:

- Wear loose fitting clothes and bright colors so cars can see you from a distance.
- Learn the basic maintenance skills in case your bicycle should get a flat or be in need of minor repairs. Any of the local bicycle shops should be able to explain how to take care of your bicycle. The first thing you should learn how to do is fix a flat tire.
- Always let cars have the right of way. It's not worth taking risks.
- Invest in a helmet if you plan on bicycling as a frequent hobby.
- Don't overdo it when riding. Find a relaxing pace and stick with it.
- Bring along a windbreaker to combat the winds of Bowling Green!

For additional information on some of the cycling routes are available, write to Box 8308, Missoula, Mont. 59807.

hostel for the past seven years of its 15-year existence.

"We had over 1,200 overnights last year," Mrs. Beard said. "Just a few of the cyclists who stayed were on cycling routes."

She said two New York men flew to Oregon, where the Bikecentennial route begins, and were attempting to bike across the country in 40 days. "When they arrived, they hadn't showered for the last four days so this place looked like a palace to them," she said.

Prince washed up in "Purple Rain"

by Marcella Grande

"It's great, you gotta go see it!" they said of the motion picture "Purple Rain."

And so I did. And so I was a fool. As I sat watching Prince make a nympho-narcissist of himself, I thought about my $4.50 sitting in the box office, a $4.50 I would have rather spent seeing "Attack of the Killer Tomatoes."

His music took me in. How can I pass up an artist so unique, someone who slithers around in Edwardian threads and plays a mixture of teenie bop rock and Jimi Hendrix, I thought?

"Purple Rain" is quite the appropriate title as it describes how rain, the color of royalty, comes washing down on Prince. He says little throughout the entire movie, so either he's too cool or he can't act. Probably the latter is true. Instead, he frequently grants these sly smirks of approval out of the corner of his eye. His co-star Apollonia is depicted as a subordinate female who moves to take Prince's clothes off in the love scene, but then Prince stops her and makes her take her clothes off first.

Summer wraps up largest film season

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Suspense, supernatural high jinks and sex dominated the final weekend of what is shaping up as the biggest summer in film industry history.

Clint Eastwood's "Tightrope" held first place for a third straight weekend even though its gross of $7.1 million for the four-day Labor Day holiday was slightly down from the previous three-day weekend.

But feisty "Ghostbusters" almost regained the top spot by scaring up $6.8 million, nearly $2 million more than a weekend earlier.

She will do anything for her lover, even jump in a lake!

Prince commands sympathy from viewers by using his parents who beat on each other one minute and embrace in mad passion the next.

By the time Prince's father attempts suicide, I find it difficult to feel sorry for him any longer. Up to this point, I've been resigned to the fact that the movie is plotted solely toward Prince's gratification.

Although I did not enjoy Prince's ego trip on film, I still appreciate his musical talent. I just think he should leave professional acting to Pacino, Streep, Newman and Fonda.

After all, I don't see Redford twanging an electric guitar.

"Bolero," a sexually explicit adventure starring Bo Derek, scored $4.6 million in its maiden outing to replace "Red Dawn" at third place. But critics predicted a short theatrical life for the film, which was released without a rating because its raciness supposedly would have earned it an X.

STEVEN SPIELBERG

Despite 11 winning films
some doubt his maturity

by Benjamin Marrison

When the name 'Steven Spielberg' appears atop a movie credit list, it is almost guaranteed to be a box-office smash.

Neal Gabler, one of the hosts of PBS's "Sneak Previews," said, "Just put his name on top of anything and people want to see it."

Spielberg's chart-topping movies include: "Jaws," "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," "Raiders of the Lost Ark," "E.T.," "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" and, most recently, "Gremlins."

Although his name appeared on the credits list, "Spielberg didn't have that much to do with 'Gremlins,' but people jammed theaters to see it because they saw his name listed," Jeffrey Lyons, Gabler's co-host, said.

"If Spielberg would have produced the movie, he would have had the father save his child from the evil Gremlin and not the child save himself," Gabler said.

Dr. John Nachbar, professor of popular culture at the University, said Spielberg would approve of "Gremlins."

"He did have some influence on the movie because some of his friends produced it," Nachbar said.

The success of the producer, who is closing in on Frank Capra's production record of 11 straight movie successes, has been attributed to "his uncanny way of making you remember when you were a kid," Lyons said.

"What he is into is the insistence that we return to a childlike point of view. He creates a childlike intuitive acceptance of the fantastic," Nachbar said.

His use of menacing authority and the lost child in ordinary suburbia, coupled with his own sentimentality and a subtle sense of humor, have made him a box-office giant, the critics said.

From his family life, Spielberg derives his creative philosophy of placing an ordinary person in extraordinary situations and having the person win the battle.

Spielberg was born in Cincinnati. His parents divorced and he grew up with a hunger for technology along with three sisters in a small Arizona town.

"One day his father came home with a micro-chip and said this is the way of the future," Lyons said. "The younger Spielberg promptly ate it."

Nachbar said Spielberg began making films when he was "a little kid" and went on to become a film school product in the same manner as George Lucas.

"They are the backbone to the new generation of filmmaking," Nachbar said. Lyons believes Spielberg will be around for a long time. "If anybody can change with the times, it is Spielberg. He is timeless."

Nachbar disagrees entirely. "He's just spinning his wheels doing spinoffs from his old movies. 'Indiana Jones (and the Temple of Doom)' is a less interesting effort than 'Raiders of the Lost Ark,' and 'E.T.' doesn't say much that wasn't already said in 'Close Encounters of the Third Kind.'"

Nachbar cited "E.T." as the prime example. "E.T." is a spinoff of 'The Wizard of Oz.' 'E.T.' is Dorothy who just wants to go back home," Nachbar said.

Although "E.T." is the highest grossing movie of all-time, Nachbar said "Jaws" is his finest movie to date. "When 'Jaws' came out, it became the number one movie of all time," he said.

"He's unquestionably a highly talented filmmaker who is able to tap into what the mass audience wants to see," Nachbar said.

Of course, Spielberg has no financial worries with more than $500 million in the bank.

However, he has never won an academy award. "After he has aged and humbled a bit, he'll get the recognition he deserves," Lyons said.

Have we lost the Boss?

A 'runaway publicity machine' may ruin the mystique that was Bruce Springsteen

by Henry Marchand

America is excessive. Its citizens overdo things to vulgar degrees: fast food, nuclear arms, designer jeans. Americans lose all sense of proportion. Take, for another example, what fans are doing to Bruce Springsteen.

Springsteen is a fine musician and songwriter and an electrifying concert performer. Few musicians today can get an audience rocking like he can. While he may deserve praise and admiration, that is not what he's getting.

Due to the efforts of expert publicity people and to the insatiable appetite of the American populace for heroes, he is becoming a media industry. Should this happen, we will lose one of our most insightful, potent musical voices and gain another Michael Jackson. There is danger here.

In the cover story of a recent People magazine, Springsteen is labeled a "Blue-collared Troubadour," an image for which he has long been admired. In the accompanying article, writer Chet Flippo paints a picture of Springsteen's image that ignores one inescapable fact; if the intensive hype surrounding him prevails, the man's image will be obscured. His appeal will fade inevitably and he will be abandoned by the working class music lovers. He will become just another plastic idol forced upon fans by BIG money.

So who is the man behind the image? He's a guy from New Jersey (That, of course is a plus) who claims to have been "dead" for all intent and purpose, until he bought a used guitar at the age of 13.

In the early 70s, he was a major force in a musical mini-renaissance that rocked the Jersey shoreline and spawned musicians such as Steve Van Zandt, who left Springsteen's E. Street Band to start Little Steven and the Disciples of Soul. Another notable who played at the Stone Pony was Johnny Lyon of Southside Johnny and the Asbury Jukes. In a few short years, Asbury Park, N.J., became nationally known for introducing it's Stone Pony heroes.

Springsteen established his music of jazzy undertones and evocative imagery with his first two albums, "Greetings From Asbury Park," and "The Wild, The Innocent and The E. Street Shuffle." When "Born to Run" came out, his fame and status were assured.

Then the hype began. Springsteen was on the cover of Time and Newsweek.

But the hype didn't peak there, and it may not have crested yet.

"Darkness on the Edge of Town," "The River" and even "Nebraska" were pushed hard by Columbia Records. Though "Nebraska" was a bleak and musically bare collection of songs, it sold very well despite critics' predictions that it would alienate Springsteen's staunchest fans.

Springsteen's seventh and latest album hardly follows "Nebraska." "Born in The U.S.A." is the most upbeat and driving collection of songs he's ever performed. Ironically, negative subject matter can be detected in the title track that is supposedly Springsteen's expression of love for his country.

Few listeners catch the negativism in the lyrics, or care to. Whether or not fans are really listening is questionable.

It appears as if the man's art is losing its importance because what is being demanded of him is "surface" and not "substance."

Fortunately, this surfacing could mean more money, tours and albums for Bruce, but will accelerate a cycle of glamorous hype and a diminishing artistic strength.

If Springsteen, himself, does not apply the brakes to his runaway publicity machine, the day will come when his fans, too long force-fed with the working class hero image, will choke on the mention of his name.

Taking a man's strength and exaggerating it to the point of being a liability and a weakness is deplorable and unfair.

Rock 'n roll fans have a bonafide hero in Bruce Springsteen. But the hero will fade unless the emphasis is placed on the man and his art instead of the label and his image.

See the Sea at BG

by Marcella Grande

Ohio's northern shores conveniently acquaint people with a freshwater environment, but the University is capable of introducing ocean lovers to a sea environment via the marine laboratory on the second floor of the Life Science building.

Students who volunteer their time to maintain the lab served as tour guides for over 1,300 visitors last year, according to Cynthia Groat, marine science coordinator.

Groat said the campus lab is unmatched in Ohio universities, as it houses exotic marine creatures that draw groups of school children, senior citizens and college students.

Gwynne Stoner, senior biology major and lab assistant, held up Squeaky, a horseshoe crab from a mangrove swamp.

"We call him Squeaky because we packed him in styrofoam on the way from the field trip and every time we stopped at a gas station, he squeaked," Stoner said. "He's one of the most active animals we have in here."

Squeaky's body structure hasn't evolved in millions of years since it is so adaptable. He eats food through his central conveyor belt opening and is protected by a hard shell.

"He's not dangerous at all," said Jeff Kaszubski, senior biology major and lab assistant. "A lot of people don't know that he is more related to a spider than a crab."

Kaszubski and Stoner were part of the annual spring break excursion to the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory in Mississippi where they collected several specimens for the lab.

Icicle arms flutter from the white sea anemones suctioned to the sides of the tank. They were found buried one to two feet deep in grassbeds.

An octopus was a great asset to the lab, but he seems to be lost inside the tank, probably lodged between almost anything, Stoner said.

As tourists enter the lab, a six-legged starfish waves "hello" from inside his tank.

Hermit crabs and sea urchins dominate the population of lab critters. They are the easiest to care for. "All they do is live, live, live," Stoner said.

The brittle starfish has long, pinchy appendages and a sac-like central body that makes one want to squirm away at the touch.

Stoner and Kaszubski were excited about the acquisition of a cowry shell. This mangrove swamp native sleeps beneath his built-in blanket that covers his shell. When disturbed, the blanket or mantle retreats inside his shell.

As tourists enter the lab, a six-legged starfish waves "hello" from inside his tank, a product of defective regeneration.

Weekdays, 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., the starfish greets visitors along with all his oceanic friends. Lab students are glad to take visitors around but ask that large groups schedule appointments in advance.

As soon as students help figure out how they will display the newest acquisitions of Groat's trip to the San Diego shores, tourists will be able to see the shark jaws and dolphin placenta she collected.

The lab has been open since 1963, but there is a constant turnover in creatures as well as students. Field trips taken by Groat and her students result in increasingly unusual organisms at the University.

As the students care for their tanks in the marine lab, their enthusiasm reflects a belief that they really have recreated the sea and brought it to B.G.

All that's missing is the beach.
